

first touch striker school

challenge development program

first touch striker school directed by Bruce Murray

THE DIRECTOR:

Bruce Murray was an integral part of American soccer during the 80's and 90's. He set numerous records, and led the U.S. attack on many occasions. Not only was he a solid member of the U.S. National Team, but he also played on the 1988 Olympic soccer team. Murray also earned National Rookie of the Year honors after helping Clemson University win the National title. Murray saved his best season for his senior year when he captured the Hermann Trophy, as well as earning All-America status for the second time, while leading the Tigers to their second national title. Bruce is a former Harvard Men's assistant coach and holds a USSF "A" License.
